

Use Thomas's thoughts to write conditionals as in the example, then state the types of conditionals (real present, unreal present, unreal past).

Thomas is on a desert island and he is thinking.

1. I'll make a hut. I don't want to sleep under the trees.

2. I don't have a bottle. I can't send a message.

3. I didn't save the radio transmitter. I didn't call for help.

4. There are too many sharks and I can't escape.

5. I have no company. I feel lonely.

6. I'll make an axe. Then I may be able to make a raft.

7. I lost my knife in the water. I didn't cut any branches down.

8. Please let someone find me, or I'll die on this island.

1. ... If I make a hut, I won't have to sleep under the trees. (real present)

2.

3.

4.

5.

6.

7.

8.

Put the verbs in brackets into the correct tense.

- If she ... hadn't broken ... (not / break) the window, she wouldn't have had to pay for a new one.
- If it ... (not/be) cold, they wouldn't have lit the fire.
- If she studied more, she ... (be) a better student.
- They ... (not/see) the Queen if they hadn't visited London on that day.
- If you should win that competition, you ... (be) rich.
- If I lived in France, I ... (speak) French well.
- If they ... (lock) the doors, the burglars wouldn't have got in.
- We ... (have) a party if Alan passes his driving test.
- I ... (give) John your message if I should see him today.
- They ... (not/have) any money if their cousin hadn't lent them some.
- Those plants ... (not/grow) if you don't water them.
- I would buy that bag if it ... (be) cheaper.
- If she ... (open) the letter, she would have been surprised.